

Milestone 1 – Project Proposal | Team 109-1

Team Number	109-1
Team Name	After Five
Team Members	George Allison, Mohamad Aqbar Azman, Caitlin Neppl, Zachary Guse
Application Name	Urban History
Application Description	Incredible things happen in all kinds of places! Urban History is a great way to mark the places that are special to you, and you can see what places are special to others as well. Drop a pin with a brief description at memory's location, and share in others' memories by perusing the map. Who knows what memorable events have happened right under your feet? With Urban History you'll finally know.
Vision Statement	The desired outcome of our application is to bring the community together by sharing personal events tied to the geographical areas we all spend time in. The sharing of personal experiences can supplement all kinds of public areas, making them more personable and fuller of character to the public eye.
Version Control
Development Method	Our team will follow a lean launch methodology in conjunction with agile software development practices in order to continuously test our product, evaluate our vision statement and value proposition, and pivot when necessary. Feedback from potential end users and beneficiaries will be utilized during the incremental approach of prototyping and building our software product.
Communication Plan	Our team has connected on Slack for communication and will also occasionally meet in-person, outside of the weekly lab times we share.
Proposed Architecture Plan	Our app's backend will rely on the Google Maps API along with a MySQL database for storing account information. Swift or C++ will be used depending on the targeted devices/operating systems.
